FIXING BLAME FOR SCHOOL FIRE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Peabody, Mass., Oct. 29.—Vigorous investigations were begun by the state police today to determine the cause and place the responsibility for the fire at the St. John's Parochial School, which cost the lives of 21 girl pupils.

It was declared that the state would also make thorough inquiry into the disaster.

Renewed search continued today for other bodies that might be in the ruins. Two more bodies were identified early today. Five unidentified are still in the morgue. Some of the authorities blamed "faulty stairway construction" in the building for the loss of life. Acting Chief New of the state police said:

"If there had been fire escapes on the building or metal covered doors at the foot of the stairs leading to the basement, every one of the hundreds of children in the building could have escaped."

Neal said the faulty stairway construction lay in the fact that the stairs were arranged in such a manner that to get outside the children had to pass by the basement entrance. Neal stated that the flames from the basement blocked all egress by way of the front entrance, choking the stairway and caused the loss of life.

Fire Commissioner O'Keefe of the greater Boston Fire Prevention district, declared that many Boston public as well as private schools faced the same danger as the Peabody school, and urged "isolated basements" and automatic sprinklers for all school buildings.

There are nineteen bodies in Conway's undertaking rooms. Of this number fourteen have been identified. The two were identified as Marion Hayes and Mary Meade, both of whom died of burns at the Thomas Hospital in Peabody.

Dramatic scenes attended the identification of bodies, adding a deep pathos to the town's sorrowing for its school-girl dead. There also came today new stories of the heroism of the pupils and the courage and bravery of the sisters who risked their own lives to save the girls.

Five more missing children, whose bodies it is feared are the five unidentified dead are: Agnes Ahearn, eight; Petronella Chobator, seven; Katherine Compagno, ten; Anna Jones, ten; Ann Kenny, ten.

NEW LIEUTENANTS FOR COMPANY M

At the armory Thursday evening the members of Company M elected two new lieutenants to fill the vacancies owing to the resignation of Lieutenants Carpenter and Kuehn, which were accepted some time ago, leaving the local national guard company with only one commissioned officer. For the election, Colonel Klein, commanding officer of the Tenth Regiment, of which Company M is a unit, ordered Captain Frank L. Meagher as officer in charge.

For the rank of first lieutenant the only candidate was Sergeant Rudolph C. Dittus, who had frequently been mentioned as the choice of the members for a commission, he being their candidate for second lieutenant before First Lieutenant Kuehn handed in his resignation. Out of a total of 68 votes cast, Sergeant Dittus received 66 votes, two of the ballots being void.

There was a little opposition for the rank of second lieutenant, two members seeking this commission, Sergeant Philo Powell and Corporal Leroy Cashin. For the junior lieutenant Corporal Cashin defeated Sergeant Powell, the former receiving 41 votes and the latter 24. There were 58 votes cast for second lieutenant, two of the ballots being void.

Both of the newly elected lieutenants are well qualified for the rank and their election as commissioned officers of the local command will do much towards maintaining the standard of efficiency set by the former officers of Company M. Before being commissioned they will have to appear before the brigade examining board at Albany, to be questioned as to their knowledge of the military game, besides taking a form of civil service examination.

At the armory Saturday evening Major Chandler will have a school for the officers of his battalion which will include Companies E, F, K, M. Captain Meagher has made arrangements whereby the two new lieutenants can be in attendance at this school.

Halloween Party This Evening.

Halloween will be celebrated this evening with a "hard time" party at the Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock and the senior members of the association are invited to be present with their wives or lady friends. One of the features of the evening will be Joe Lorraine of New York city who will tell appropriate ghost stories. Halloween games will be played and a royal good time is assured for those who attend. If the seniors come alone they will have to pay an admission of fifty cents, but if accompanied by a lady the charge will be thirty-nine cents.

STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT BUSY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Oct. 29.—One of the most active departments of the state government is the department of highways. For many months the clerks have remained at the desks long after 5 o'clock in the afternoon, the hour when most of the employees of the state are through for the day. The vast amount of detail work which the department of highways is called upon to perform has made it necessary for those who have positions there to give extra time to the state and they do so, some without complaint, others with as much cheerfulness as is to be expected.

As a good general leads his troops, so does Highway Commissioner Edw. Duffey set the example for his force of subordinates. He and his secretary, Irving J. Morris, are the last to leave the office where they frequently transact themselves many matters which are urgent.

Commissioner Duffey is determined that the people of the state and those of other states who use the highway system over which he has jurisdiction, shall receive the greatest possible comfort through the medium of well constructed and carefully maintained roads. He keeps in close touch with all of the many branches of his department, consulting a highway engineer here, summoning one of his auditors there and questioning contractors everywhere.

For the past few years much fault has been found with the highway department and the investigation which was directed by former Governor William Sulzer is still fresh in the memory of those who followed the accounts of alleged mismanagement and read of the charges made by the Sulzer probes that many roads were badly constructed and should never have been paid for.

Commissioner Duffey is known to be an enthusiastic good road advocate. He is constantly studying road building problems and it is said of him that it is his ambition to make famous the highway system of New York state.

The season for road building is rapidly nearing a close. But one more letting of contracts remains, after which the big field force will be called in for the winter and the work of planning for the spring of 1916 will be taken up.

The subject of road construction is one which is to receive much consideration. Commissioner Duffey will go deep into brick, macadam and concrete road durability and availability for New York state traffic. Each uncompleted link in the long chain of good roads will be studied with a view of providing every locality where a state highway is to be built, with the most serviceable one for that locality.

Frequent changes are made in the specifications for good roads by the state highway department and the result has been that since the work of building permanent and durable public highways has been undertaken many improved methods of cement and stone tests are constantly being made, new machinery is being used and the use of tar and oil is being studied to determine the exact amount which makes for an ideal road surface.

BRITISH LOSSES 493,294 TO OCT. 1

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Oct. 29.—British casualties in all the theatres of war up to October 9 were 493,294 officers and men.

These figures were given out officially today by Premier Asquith. In the western theatre (France and Belgium) the English forces have lost 365,046 officers and men in killed, wounded and missing.

The casualties in all the theatres of action in which British troops are fighting, are divided as follows:

Killed—Officers, 6,660.
Other ranks—34,932.
Wounded—Officers—12,633.
Other ranks—304,832.
Missing—Officers—2,000.
Other ranks—72,177.

Special Service for Young People.

The evangelistic services held in the Wurts Street Baptist Church during the past two weeks, which have increased in interest and attendance at every service under the sincere guidance of Miss Margaret Bevan, the Welsh girl evangelist, will close the week day services this evening. Miss Bevan has arranged for a special service for young people and the public is invited to take advantage of this last week day opportunity to hear Miss Bevan sing and speak. Service of song commences at 7:30 o'clock. Inasmuch as no collections have been taken during the services, a collection to help defray the expense necessarily incurred will be taken this evening, and it is hoped all will respond generously. Everyone is invited.

Sunshine Society Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Sunshine Society will be held next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Updegraff, No. 251 Wall street.

FRANCE TO HAVE COALITION CABINET

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, Oct. 29.—France is to have a coalition cabinet in succession to the Viviani ministry which resigned yesterday. In an effort to strengthen the government Aristide Briand, who was commissioned by President Poincare to form a new cabinet, invited representatives of all factions to accept portfolios.

In his conferences with prospective appointees, M. Briand declared that patriotism would have to take first place in the mind of every man who enters the new government. "Politics must be left behind and forgotten in this gloomy hour," said M. Briand.

Six former premiers of France were offered places in the new cabinet, showing the extent of M. Briand's efforts to have all shades of political opinion represented. Although M. Briand offered to assume the portfolio of foreign minister, it was understood that foreign policy would be declared by Jules Cambon, who was French ambassador to Germany when the war broke out.

General satisfaction was expressed over the filling of the post of minister of war with General Gallieni, military governor of Paris. General Gallieni is a soldier of long experience and high attainments. He is given credit for saving Paris when General Von Kluck's German legions were rushing through France toward this city in September, 1914.

The unofficial list of members in the next government, based upon the developments that have arisen since the Viviani cabinet went out, follows:

Premier and foreign minister—Briand.
Minister of war—General Gallieni.
Minister of marine—Rear Admiral Lacaze.
Minister of justice—Viviani.
Minister of finance—Ribot.
Minister of commerce—Klotz.
Minister of agriculture—Clemente.
Minister of instruction—Pamieue.
Minister of interior—Maivy.

French statesmen declare that speaking technically the collapse of the Viviani government was not a crisis because the chamber of deputies had not expressed a lack of confidence in the ministry. However, the political situation is causing anxiety. Affairs in the Balkans look even more gloomy today than they did yesterday as it is now reported that both Greece and Roumania are giving serious consideration to new German offers.

KING GEORGE THROWN FROM HORSE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Oct. 29.—While reviewing troops King George was thrown from his horse on Thursday and injured.

Although it was officially reported that the king was "severely bruised" his majesty is unable to leave his bed and there are indications that his condition may develop serious complications.

A bulletin issued by the court physician says:

"King George had a fair night and got some sleep. His temperature was 99.2 and his pulse 75. His general condition is showing improvement. No complications have arisen."

News of the accident to his majesty was kept secret for 48 hours. It was finally given out through the government press bureau. The official report on the affair follows:

"While the king was inspecting his army in the field yesterday his horse became excited by the cheers of the soldiers and reared, falling to the ground. The king was severely bruised and will be compelled to remain in bed for the present."

A Reformatory Graduate.

Otto Kruger, one of the bandits who robbed a United Cigar store on the Bowery, New York city, on Thursday night, according to the story he told the police when captured, had been released from the Napanoch reformatory only eight days ago. After being released from the reformatory he returned to New York and joined another gunman in robbing the cigar store. Kruger afterwards ran into a tenement and held off the police for some time with revolvers. He was captured and locked up charged with robbery and assault and carrying concealed weapons.

Entered in Church League.

The Rondout Presbyterian Church has entered an indoor baseball team and a basketball team in the church leagues to be organized next month at the Y. M. C. A. This makes three churches that have so far accepted the invitation extended by Physical Director Godfrey to enter teams in the leagues. The other two churches are the Trinity M. E. Church of Wurts street and the First Presbyterian Church of Elmendorf street. The leagues will be started next month.

Company M Drills Monday.

Owing to Tuesday being election day, the members of Company M will hold the regular weekly drill on Monday night of next week.

MISS LOUISE SCHMITZ.

MRS. F. C. HOTELLING.

HONEST GIRL WINS REWARD AND JOB.

Miss Louise Schmitz and Mrs. F. C. Hotelling.

New York, Oct. 29.—Miss Louise Schmitz is a living example of the "honesty is the best policy" adage. She received a $100 reward and a position in a hand-dressing establishment for returning the $2,000 diamond bracelet, lost by Mrs. F. C. Hotelling of San Francisco, who is stopping at a hotel here.

Miss Schmitz, tramping the streets in search of work, found the bracelet at the corner of Broadway and 42nd street on Monday and immediately reported her find to the police department. Mrs. Hotelling had reported her loss, so the bracelet was returned to her.

Miss Schmitz came from Bridgeport, Conn., about a week ago. She was thoroughly discouraged at failing to find employment when she found the bracelet.

Mrs. Hotelling gave her the reward and secured the position for her.

VERDICT OF $500 IN $20,000 SUIT

This morning the jury in the action brought by Mrs. Jennie Rose to recover $20,000 damages for the death of her son, Harry Rose, from Frank Van Voorhees of Saugerties, brought in a sealed verdict in supreme court awarding Mrs. Rose the sum of $500. The trial was finished late Thursday afternoon and sent to the jury who arrived at a verdict at 10 o'clock that evening. The verdict as rendered read: "We the undersigned find the defendant guilty of contributory negligence in not having his headlights lighted and award the plaintiff the sum of $500" and was signed by each of the twelve jurors. Judge Hasbrouck said that the verdict was in an improper form and directed that the verdict be entered as finding for plaintiff in the sum mentioned. The action arose from the collision of Van Voorhees' automobile with a motorcycle on which was riding Floyd Overbaugh and Harry Rose, on the evening of September 12, 1914 on the state road between Malden and Saugerties, in which the young men were killed. The case was tried for Mrs. Rose by George F. Kaufman with Cunningham & Traver of counsel, while Corporation Counsel William D. Brinnier and his son City Judge Brinnier appeared for Mr. Van Voorhees.

Story of Cantata.

The story of the cantata to be given this evening by the Queen Esther Girls of the St. James M. E. Church in the lecture room of the church, is a very pretty one and will lend itself to a musical setting. A levy of school girls are choosing their May Queen and there is much rivalry between the aspirants for the honor. It is finally given to the girl whose surname is and lovable character makes her a favorite with all. One of the especially pleasing features of the cantata is the Maypole drill. Only a very small admission will be charged for this charming entertainment, and in addition there will be home made candy for sale.

Choir School Appreciated.

In this month's issue of the "New Music Review" there appears in the department of Ecclesiastical Music, edited by G. Edward Stubbs, Mus. Doc., an excellent article highly commending the new Choir School for Boys, just opened in connection with the Church of the Messiah, Rhinebeck, and of which Norman Coke-Jephcott is the music master. The article calls attention to the need of just such schools, where boys with exceptional voices may receive both a good common school education and also the necessary musical training.

"A Pair of Sixes" Tonight.

The laugh show of last season will be presented at the Opera House again tonight, with the same cast and production which made such a tremendous hit when here. The seat sale indicates a capacity audience, so it is up to you to get busy with your telephone and reserve your seats for this evening, because "A Pair of Sixes" always draws a "Full House" wherever presented.

REAL ESTATE MEN HAVE ORGANIZED

The real estate brokers of Ulster county held an enthusiastic meeting on Tuesday evening in the office of Franklin E. Bassett, No. 29 East Street, and adopted an organization by adopting by-laws and a constitution and electing the following officers: President, Charles T. Goulet; vice president, Michael A. Reis; secretary, John F. Feldman; and treasurer, Schuyler C. Schultz. The board of governors of the organization are Charles O. Vogt for terms of three years, Franklin E. Bassett, two years, and Arthur J. Burns for one year. The organization will be known as the Kingston Real Estate Board.

The constitution, by-laws, and resolutions of the association had been reported from a committee of which Michael A. Reis was chairman, and were adopted at the meeting. The purposes of the association are to promote and protect investments in real estate; to secure the co-operation of real estate owners in Kingston and vicinity in public improvements; to secure a fair and rational system of assessments and taxation on real estate, and to advance and support legislation to further the real estate interests in Kingston and vicinity. The association has been organized to enable its active and associate members to buy, sell, rent, lease and care for real estate and negotiate loans to the best advantage, and to adopt such rules and regulations as shall formulate and promulgate a professional standard for real estate agents and brokers and to enable them to enforce the same in such manner as may be determined by the board. The field of the labors of the association will extend over the entire county and all brokers within its confines will be eligible to membership.

With the advent of the bridge across the Rondout creek, the completion of the state road through the eastern border of Esopus, and the finishing touches given the great Boulevard through the Catskills and on to the great west, Kingston city, Esopus and adjoining townships will take on many added charms completely changing their histories. The following committees were also appointed at the meeting:

Membership—S. H. Merritt, Lewis B. Davis, and Aaron Cohen.
Publicity—Ward B. Everett, Charles L. Davis and E. L. Angie.
Statistic—Franklin E. Bassett, Elva H. Bogart and John F. Feldman.
Entertainment—Schuyler C. Schultz, S. L. Merritt and Arthur Sheeley.

An Ideal Organization.

Lovers of the highest class drama will be attracted to the opera house next week and many theater goers who have never patronized popular priced amusements are destined to witness the performance of Marguerite Fields Company. The star is a gifted actress, is supported by a competent company and the plays that are to be given are the best known among dramatic successes. "A Widow by Proxy" will be presented on Monday afternoon and "Kitty MacKay" Monday evening. Souvenirs for the ladies Monday afternoon and a limited number of ladies' tickets may be had for Monday night.

ULTIMATUM TO BE SENT TO GREECE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rome, Oct. 29.—The entente powers have decided to send an ultimatum to Greece, according to information secured in semi-official circles here today. The attitude of Greece and Rumania is causing much apprehension in London and Paris.

The Athens correspondent of the Tribune states that decisive developments are expected within the next forty-eight hours. The entente powers are expected to send a note to Greece, demanding that King Constantine either demobilize or else enter the war against the Teutonic powers.

NEW CONSTITUTION AND CONSERVATION

Ulster county has been flooded with circulars attacking the conservation provision of the revised constitution. Many residents of the county interested in the Catskill mountain forest preserve, and in the fish and game of the county, having asked Judge Clearwater regarding the circular, he forwarded it to Senator Root, who writes to the judge regarding it as follows:

New York city, October 21, 1915.

My Dear Judge:—I am obliged to you for sending me the copy of the circular signed by George A. Lawler, president, and attacking the proposed constitution. The material statements of the circular are wholly false. The provision of the revised constitution relating to conservation continues and strengthens the absolute prohibition of the present constitution against any interference with the forest preserve. It provides:

"The lands of the state, now owned or hereafter acquired, constituting the forest preserve as now fixed by law, shall be forever kept as wild forest lands. They shall not be leased, sold or exchanged, or be taken by any corporation, public or private, nor shall the trees and timber thereon be sold, removed or destroyed."

This prohibition was included in the proposed revision against the efforts of the lumber interests. The whole trouble which causes the circulars is that the new provisions will interfere with some people who are now in office by substituting for the present single commission a commission similar to the Board of Regents, which has proved satisfactory in its control of education for more than a hundred and thirty years. The convention sought to give continuity to the conservation policy of the state by making this commission of nine, appointing one each year, so that no single change in the politics of the state government could turn the commission upside down. The convention also sought to make the commission free from the special influence of the forest region by requiring one member to be from each judicial district of the state, and to make it free from the worst influence in political life by making its members unpaid as the members of the Board of Regents are. That, in the deliberate judgment of the vast majority of the convention, will lead to upright and wise administration of this important subject.

The change like many of the improvements provided for in the new constitution, will interfere with some office holders. Hence this mendacious circular.

Very truly yours,

ELIHU ROOT.

How Water Melts Stone.

There are two things in rain besides the water itself that have the power to melt things, even the hardest stone, such as granite. These two things are nitric acid and carbonic acid. These acids eat away the stone, so that it seems the water slowly melts it.

MELLEN PROTESTS TO THE COURT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Oct. 29.—Charles S. Mellen, former president and vice president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railway, today finished the first stage of his direct testimony in the conspiracy trial of William Rockefeller, Lewis Cass Leary and nine other former directors of the road. He was excused until next Wednesday afternoon.

When Mellen left the stand after being a witness for eight days he had covered the period from 1892 to 1897, the "expansion period" by the New Haven when Mellen was second vice president in charge of traffic.

Before Mellen is recalled again the government will bridge the gap until 1903 when Mellen, recalled from the Union Pacific by the late J. E. Morgan, became president of the New Haven.

R. V. Lindabury, counsel for Rockefeller and leader for the defence attorneys, announced that he would not cross examine Mellen until he had completed his direct testimony.

Mellen's dismissal as a witness followed his heated protest that the proceedings were unfair.

When asked by Frank M. Swacker about a New Haven trolley deal in New England that occurred while Mellen was with the Union Pacific, Mellen burst forth. He declared he knew nothing about the letters read by the government, except that he recognized the signatures and he entered vigorous protest, that such evidence apparently be credited in the record to him "from the trolley deal."

Mellen took occasion to repudiate the testimony offered yesterday by the government tending to show that the New Haven meddled in New England politics and had legislative lobbyists on the job during its trolley activities. Mellen said that the John M. Hall letters read by the government were a complete surprise to him. They were written during the period from 1897 to 1903, when Mellen was not connected with the New Haven and he never had any knowledge of them until he heard them read in court.

"Your honor," said Mellen earnestly, "I am paralyzed that it should be made to appear by the government that these letters are my evidence. I had nothing to do with them further than to identify Mr. Hall's signature. That the uninitiated should be led to believe that they are my testimony is wholly distasteful and unjust to me. I never heard of those letters, nor of much of the other evidence that the government has put into this case with me on the witness stand, simply by having me identify signatures."

Mellen's outburst was precipitated by Swacker who after reading one of Hall's letters about the legislative end of a trolley deal, asked Mellen what he knew about it.

"Nothing," said Mellen. "I was not with the New Haven then. But by hearsay."

Swacker interrupted, asking "Did any directors ever tell you anything about it?"

Lindabury's objection was sustained. Then Mellen made his protest to the court. When he had been excused until Wednesday Swacker continued to read Hall's correspondence with New Haven directors and others about the railroads trolley activities, reading from copy books already identified by Mellen and other witnesses.

Referring to one of the trolley bills in the Connecticut legislature in 1897, Hall wrote to E. D. Robbins of Hartford, one of the defendants: "We have not desired to show our hand as a corporation in this matter but I think the time for that will come next Tuesday night."

That was the night of a committee meeting to consider the bill in question, one bearing on electric lines paralleling steam railroads.

MRS. GALT'S WEDDING GOWN NEARLY DONE

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Oct. 29.—The wedding gown in which Mrs. Norman Galt will be married to President Woodrow Wilson is almost completed, intimate friends of Mrs. Galt say. And simultaneously with this statement comes an intimation from sources close to the engaged couple that the wedding will not much longer be delayed. Despite conjectures as to the date which have come in for criticism from the White House, the intimates of the president remain confident that the ceremony will have been performed prior to the commencement of the Thanksgiving holidays—so that the new mistress of the White House can assume charge of the ancient edifice before congress convenes on December 6.

Mrs. Galt has told certain of her friends that inasmuch as her trousseau is about complete she hopes to slip away from Washington for a rest. Rumors that she will go to New York for a final fitting of her wedding dress brought the statement at the Galt home that "Mrs. Galt's private affairs or plans were of interest only to her and would not be made public."

It is understood that she will be accompanied only by her mother, Mrs. Bolling.

In connection with the wedding trousseau it is learned that Mrs. Galt has been impartial in the selection of colors but that some of the most striking gowns in the collection are various shades of silver, blue and the inimitable brown.

Stories that the wedding will be at the White House and not at the Galt home were today characterized by the president's secretary as "made out of whole cloth." Although no announcement of the place will be made until the time also is given to the public it is well known that both the president and his fiancée have agreed that the Galt home, scene of the courtship, will be the scene of the wedding and that only intimate friends will be present.

LOCAL OPTION.

Quite a number of towns in Ulster County are going to decide the question of liquor selling next Tuesday. It would be well for the voters who believe in temperance and who also believe in exercising common sense to think the matter over carefully. Now, if local prohibition diminished drunkenness and brought with it prosperity and low taxes, there would be justification in voting for it, even if it did curtail personal liberty. Unfortunately, prohibition does none of these things. Under its operation the inhabitants drink more liquor and of a worse quality than they did before, and there is noticeably more drunkenness. Taxes are actually and demonstrably increased, because ordinary property has to shoulder the burden of which the drinkers and the sellers of drink are relieved. Moreover, the assessed value of hotel property, where it exists, is lowered, which again means more for other property owners to pay. Everybody knows these statements to be strictly true. Since there is going to be no temperance under either system, why deprive the public treasury of the money which the liquor men ought to pay into it?

Roscoe Irwin must be pretty hard up for something to talk about when he says in a speech that The Freeman asserted that Christopher K. Loughran received no salary for his work as Clerk of the Board of Supervisors. This is on a par with the false statement of William C. DeWitt that we charged that he spent but fifteen minutes a day in his office. We note that Mr. DeWitt is trying to hedge by saying that we made this accusation "by innuendo," which assertion is also baseless unless it is a reflection upon him whenever we refer to another man's faithful performance of duty. Irwin's yawp is a malicious distortion of an article we published some time ago pointing to the fact that for years Mr. Loughran has without charge been doing work for various associations which are of benefit to the city. Mr. Irwin has also done work for the city without charge, but always with an eye to furthering his own interests and getting a paying job under the Government. Mr. DeWitt has also worked on the board of education without pay, in money, but actually he has been well recompensed in the opportunities to display himself in the public eye and get into politics. Mr. Loughran's labors to which we have referred have not been spectacular and have not been of a nature to lead to any personal advantage to himself outside of the affection of the many hundreds of people for whom he has made life more pleasant. It is well for the voters to consider the difference between a good fellow who is so because he is built that way and can't help it, and the artificial good fellow who is so because he thinks there is "something in it" for himself.

Not much use has been made politically this year of war terms as expressions of campaign assaults or campaign progress. We do not find candidates or parties "fighting in the trenches" or "making a Zeppelin raid on the enemy's camp." Bombs and ammunition have been strangely missing from the remarks of candidates and their friends and there has not been even the suspicion of a treasure ship or a supply train on the way to outposts under guard of a political treasurer. No candidate has been accused of trying to burn his bridges and nobody has made a retreat. Political campaigns generally find candidates making use of descriptive phrases which are having an appropriate place in the news of the day. Who has forgotten the campaign of the "Young Turks" in Kingston? The absence of war phrases from this year's political campaign may be due to the tragedy which every war phrase brings to mind. Another and the more probable reason is the practical absence of the spellbinder. In New York state the political documents relate largely to the Constitution and they have been carefully prepared by men who weigh their words. Hot air artists differ from men who wish their words to carry weight through their dignity of thought and expression. There is great difference between the spoken and written word. If you doubt this, read the Leader's report of the recent political addresses made by the Democratic candidates, which have caused so much laughter.

Gambling in "war bride" stocks apparently reaches its culmination when it becomes necessary for corporation officers and directors to issue statements that no changes in the corporate stock or charters is either intended or contemplated. Such action became necessary by reason of the sale of stock "when it and as issued." The traders doing that business assumed that the principal object of the corporation which is executing war orders is to accommodate its business transactions to the vagaries of stock gamblers. Within a few days one concern whose stock is held by a comparatively few individuals was compelled to state that its stockholders would make no change whatever or sell any of their stock, as they were well satisfied with the returns they were receiving in the shape of dividends. The brokers who were trading in the imaginary stock replied to criticisms that they sold the stock only "when, if and as issued." Trading also has been brisk in shares of an imaginary Bethlehem steel stock of the par value of $10 each, and as a result of a conference between representatives of the New York Stock Exchange and the Curb Brokers' Association, President McCormick of the latter association has announced that future transactions in such stock will be prohibited, as it does not exist and there is no assurance that the present stock will be subdivided. Playing poker is tame in comparison with the new sport.

"What was good enough for George Clinton is good enough for me," is the slogan of County Clerk DeWitt. Just so. We read in Clinton's biography that "In 1789, 1792 and 1796 Clinton received a number of votes in the electoral college, but not a sufficient number to secure him the vice-presidency." Thus we see that it is essential to the development of a truly great statesman that he be "licked" every few years. This is the year for William C. It is necessary to pinch some of the buds on the rose bush if you want to produce a big, fine rose later on. We also notice with keen interest the further statement in the Clinton biography that "he had also been chosen a deputy to the provincial congress for 1776-1777, but his various other duties prevented his attendance." That shows the folly of loading up a good man with too many jobs.

CHAMPAGNE COUNTRY.

Order and Contentment Destroyed by Ravages of War.

By Telegram to The Freeman
Washington, D. C., Oct. 29.—"Fruitfulness, splendid order and contentment characterized the Champagne country, where now the lines of the French and German trenches wind like scars through the heart of its high plains," begins a statement issued today by the National Geographic Society, which describes and locates this old land division mentioned continuously in press dispatches from the front. "Its peasant proprietors were well-to-do before the war; its cities, while small, were well-built and prosperous, and cases of poverty were seldom to be met with within its area. Its farms, under intense cultivation, yielded more than the rich holdings in the famous black-earth belt of Russia, and the wine made from its grapes was known wherever western civilization had found its way."

"Did you see where a judge somewhere has decided that a baby can cry in an apartment house?" "Indeed, did he? I didn't know that was a case which waited for a decision."—Baltimore American.

"What is your idea of ease with dignity?" "The attainment of a position," replied Senator Sorghum, "where people won't laugh if you talk about lecturing as if it were regular work."—Washington Star.

"Why is Flubbub growling at you?" "Just a slight coolness, that's all. Seems I didn't plant enough garden to rattle his poultry properly for Thanksgiving. So now he has to buy feed."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"Don't you feel that you are called on to do something for your fellow-men?" asked the indefatigable philanthropist. "I don't know whether I am or not," answered the practical man, "but the unanimity with which my fellow-men seem to expect it sometimes makes me think that I am."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Limit of Fault-Finding.
Jones was one of those men who grumble at everything and everybody. He was once attacked by inflammatory rheumatism and was carefully nursed by his wife, who was very devoted to him, in spite of his fault-finding disposition. His suffering caused her to burst into tears sometimes as she sat by his bedside.

One day a friend came in and asked him how he was getting on. "Badly, badly!" he exclaimed; "and it's all by wife's fault." "Is it possible?" asked the friend, in surprise.

"Yes. The doctor told me that humility was bad for me, and there that woman sits and cries, just to make it moist in the room."
No Wonder.
The hotel was not a very good one and the traveling men knew it. Nevertheless they were obliged to go there when they came late at night to the little town. In the middle of the night one of them was dimly conscious that something was wrong. Suddenly he realized that the trouble came from a leaking gas jet. "Wake up, Bill!" he shouted, shaking his friend violently. "The gas is escaping!" "Well," growled Bill, "can you blame it?"—Ladies Home Journal.

A Better Place.
One evening in the spring, while a certain New Yorker was putting in a week at his country place in New Hampshire, he prepared to take a ride in his motorcar, expecting to remain out until late. He therefore told his new man that he need not wait for him, instructing him when he had finished his work to lock the garage and place the key under a stone, the location of which the owner designated with much exactness. When the employer reached home after his ride he was surprised to find that the key was not in its place. When his patience had been exhausted after a fruitless search he awoke the man and received this explanation: "Why, sir, I found a much better place for it."—Harper's Magazine.

Love in a Cottage.
A group of tennis players were discussing on the veranda of the Newport Casino, the recent divorce of a former Newport belle who had married a poor young man. "I am afraid," said Mrs. August Belmont, "that such a girl doesn't realize what love in a cottage means. She thinks of it as a Newport cottage, with a Fifth Avenue town house and a Belgian field hospital on the side."—Washington Star.

on the east. The country is hilly on the north and east, while high plains form its center. It is throughout this region that the present German lines cut deepest into France.

"On the hills and undulating fields of northern and central Champagne, in the shallow soils, are grown the grapes from which France's world-famed wines are made, the aristocracy among all the wines of earth. Production in this part of France is rich and varied, but it is upon the success of the grape harvests that the good and bad years largely depend. A bad grape year is felt by all the people of the province, while a good grape year brings prosperity to all. The wine product is sent to every country in the world, and its export is large enough to represent an important item in the nation's foreign trade. Rheims and Epernay are the important centers of champagne manufacture, and miles of racks of this product are stored in labyrinthine galleries cut through the low chalk hills in their neighborhoods. A trip through these underground avenues, broken here and there by little lighted rooms where small groups of workmen bottled or cut the wines, was a regular feature on the tourist's program, whose route through France ran this way."

VILLA WARNS UNITED STATES

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 29.—General Villa, through Carlos Randall, governor of the state of Sonora in Mexico, today served warning on the state department that he would no longer be responsible for the lives and property of Americans in his territory.

Randall's communication reached the state department just before noon. In it he said that inasmuch as the United States had "given aid to the enemy by allowing his troops to pass over United States soil, the Villista government was forced to take that step."

No reply will be sent to Randall's communication. It was stated that as Carranza had been recognized this government cannot have dealings with Villa. It is believed that there are few Americans left in Villa's territory.

Is That So?

Nobody will deny that the actual necessities of human life are simple. Add a scanty article of clothing and a club to the menage of one of the larger apes in a zoo, give him a fire along with his rations, and the needs of a primitive man are supplied. Three or four days of hunger in an open post will bring the most highly civilized man to accept with avidity food that that ape would reject. The matter of requirements is not an exact science. It is altogether dependent upon the point of view.—Exchange.

TRUTH ABOUT CONSERVATION

Clausen In Constitution Broadens State's Policy.

STRENGTHENS SAFEGUARDS

One Cannot Reforest Great State In Year or In Generation—Proposed to Direct Legislature to Make an Annual Appropriation—Baseless Character of Attacks.

Albany, Oct. 28.—The Committee for the Adoption of the Constitution today gave out a statement in answer to the attacks on the Conservation article in the proposed Constitution which is characterized as untruthful and misleading. The statement follows:

No other article of the proposed Constitution has been subjected to the same amount of ignorant and malicious misrepresentation as Article VII, providing for an unpaid Conservation Commission of nine members and for broadening the scope of the State's Conservation policy.

During the twenty years from 1895 to 1915 the record of the Conservation Department is one of almost continuous change without substantial progress. In 1895 the old conservation commission of three members was legislated out of office and a new commission of five members substituted. In 1897 the commission was changed back to three members. In 1899 the commission was again reduced from five to three. In 1903 it was reduced from three to one. Once in 1907 and twice in 1911 the commissioner of the single headed department was changed. In August, 1911, the single headed department was legislated out of existence and a commission of three substituted. In 1915 this commission was legislated out of office and a single commissioner again provided for.

The unpaid commission of nine members is constituted like the Regent of the Department of Education and for precisely the same purpose—namely, to ensure the people a continuous administration free from the constant changes which have hitherto taken place. Like the Board of Regents, too, it is empowered to choose its own executive officer. The unpaid commission, representing every section of the state, will determine questions of broad departmental policy, but the administration, as at present, will be entrusted to a single executive, who will, like the Commissioner of Education, be an expert in the sort of work that will devolve upon him. The rules and regulations will be framed by the commission. They will be enforced by its executive officer.

Importance of Continuous Policy. Why should the proposed Constitution lay special stress upon the ability to ensure a continuous policy?

For a very simple reason. The present Constitution contemplates only the protection of the forest preserves and of fish and game. These are essential activities which are continued by the proposed Constitution, but much more is needed if there is to be any real conservation of the natural resources of the State.

The underground water of the State has been slowly receding and decreasing the fertility of the soil. In the past forty years over the United States generally underground water has sunk nine feet. This is one of the heavy prices which agriculture has paid for the denuding of our forests by the unsound lumbering of a great majority of lumbering companies. It is impossible to use the streams of the State for the power which they could naturally develop because their flow is irregular.

For both of these reasons any policy of true conservation must contemplate conserving the water supply and decreasing the rapidity of its runoff. The only way to save water is to plant trees. No policy of conserving the water supply is possible except by the protection of all existing forests and by the reforestation of denuded water sheds.

State Aid For Reforestation.

One cannot reforest a great state in a year or in a generation. Nor could any systematic or extensive scheme of reforestation of privately owned lands be undertaken on private initiative or by private means. The proposed Constitution will meet this situation by directing the legislature to make an annual appropriation not only for the reforestation of the state preserves, but also in aid of the reforestation of privately owned woodlands. If the administration of the Conservation Department were to change every few years, as it has in the past, any money devoted by the State to the above mentioned purpose would be practically wasted.

This is a simple and truthful statement of the reason why the Constitutional Convention became convinced that no progress could be made except through a Conservation Department able to carry out plans over a period of years. The nine-headed unpaid Commission, with overlapping terms was created, largely on the model of the Board of Regents of the Educational Department. The object was precisely the same for conservation with continuity of purpose and ability to carry out plans over a long series of years, which has characterized the educational work of the State and been notable by its absence in most every other field of State activity. In a circular dated Sept. 17, 1915, George A. Lawyer of Watervliet makes a series of statements which are notable for the violence of their suspicions and for inaccuracies and falsehoods. Apparently ignorant of all law, absent from all the deliberations of the Constitutional Convention, accepting none of the many invitations extended to all friends of conservation for consultation with the Committee of the Convention, Mr. Lawyer hands out his suspicions as though they were facts.

His competence and his accuracy may be well gauged from this:

Baseless Character of Attacks. In the provision that the Conservation Commission shall not have jurisdiction over the migratory fish of the sea, Mr. Lawyer sees the "fine Italian hand of the fish trust." Mr. Lawyer is apparently ignorant of the fact that jurisdiction over such fish is vested in the national government and cannot be taken from it. The same provision exists today in the conservation law of the State and for exactly the same reason.

Out of similar suspicion and ignorance he charges that the Conservation article turns over the forests of the State to the lumbering interests. Every reader can settle these lies for himself. All he needs to do is to turn to the proposed Constitution issued by the Secretary of State. On page 27, in section 1, he will find that no person engaged in the lumbering business or in any business in which water power is used, or who holds stocks or bonds of any such corporation, shall be appointed, or shall continue to serve as commissioner of Conservation.

In section 2, at the top of page 28, he will find that dead trees and timber may be removed from the forest preserves, but not be sold.

The same section just referred to condemns absolutely unchanged the provisions of the present Constitution, that the forest preserve shall be forever kept as wild forest land and that no part of it shall ever be leased, sold or exchanged, nor shall the trees or timber be sold or destroyed.

Destructive Proposals Rejected. The Constitutional Convention rejected all proposals for cutting matured timber in the forest preserve. It rejected proposals to cut out the present limitations on using the forest preserve for water storage. It refused to give power companies the right to cross the forest preserves. It refused to give owners of private power sites the right to condemn surrounding property for their own benefit.

Document No. 28 of the Constitutional Convention shows that those whom Mr. Lawyer charges with being the authors of Article VII filed a minority report. They favored giving the Conservation Commission discretion to do the following things:

- (a) Build highways in the forest preserves.
 - (b) Lease camp sites in forest preserves.
 - (c) Sell forest preserve lands outside of the Adirondack and Catskill Parks.
 - (d) Divide the forest preserve into two classes, in the second of which timber might be cut, sold or removed.
- In the final paragraph of their minority report they object to Article VII because "it perpetrates still further limitations on the already too narrow policy in the care, use and development of the forest preserve."

All Safeguards Strengthened.

In spite of these facts, which any honest and intelligent man dealing with a matter of public importance was under moral duty to ascertain, Mr. Lawyer asks the people to believe that this proposed commission is to be "packed." Who is to "pack" it? The commissioners are to be appointed by the Governor of the State, one every year. A governor who serves two full terms will only have it within his power to appoint four of the nine commissioners. And even if there were danger of a governor "packing" such a commission he could just as easily "pack" every other office in the state which he is empowered to fill, and if that be a danger then civil government in the state had better be abolished.

However, this argument is never at a loss. If the Conservation Commission itself is not "packed" the executive head of the department whom they appoint will be a "tool." He will be no more a "tool" than is President Finley of the State Department of Education, who is similarly appointed by the Board of Regents. He will, however, under the proposed conservation commission, have an opportunity for a long term of continuous service, a tremendous advantage to the efficient enforcement of all the laws connected with conservation.

But then you are asked to believe that the provision of Section 5 of Article VII, that the Legislature shall annually appropriate money for the extension of the forest preserve, is put there at the instance of lumbering men who wish to sell their denuded lands. It was actually put there at the urgent request of the Association for the Protection of the Adirondacks, which has long urged such a policy upon the State.

PENSIONS FOR CLERGY.

Important Matter to Come Before the Diocesan Convention.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Oct. 29.—When the delegates to the Episcopal convention of the diocese of New York take their seats in Synod Hall on November 10th they will be prepared to act upon several matters of extraordinary importance in the life of the church. One of the chief of these is the question whether or not the diocese of New York, extending from Staten Island to the northern ends of Dutchess and Ulster counties and comprising 5,500 square miles, will approve the proposed plan to pension Protestant Episcopal clergymen. This is the greatest financial undertaking ever proposed to the church.

On this account keen interest will be attached to the report of a committee which was given a year in which to consider the value of this fund. It can now be safely said that the report of the committee will be favorable to the scheme provided the Clergy Pension Fund raises an accrued liabilities fund of $5,000,000. The action of the New York convention is being awaited throughout the country, since New York's approval would practically clinch the establishment of the fund. The committee includes Bishop Burch, chairman; the Rev. Dr. C. E. Slattery, Archdeacon Pott, the Rev. Dr. Frank F. German, secretary of the convention, Ogden Mills, Stephen Baker, Francis S. Bangs and Edmund L. Baylies.

During the coming week old Synod Hall on the grounds of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine will be put in order and by the end of the week exhibits of twenty-five or more organizations in the diocese will be erected under the direction of the Rev. Dr. Charles P. Tinker, of the City Mission Society and the Rev. Floyd S. Leach, Ph.D., of the Social Service Commission.

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question is asked every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather but often due to disordered blood or lack of important food-elements. In changing seasons fat foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the system better able to withstand the varying elements. This is the important reason why Scott's Emulsion should always be taken for colds, and it does more—builds strength to prevent sickness.

Scott's Emulsion contains Nature's rare strength-building fats, so skillfully blended that the blood profits from every drop. It is free from harmful drugs or alcohol. Sold at drug stores—always get the genuine.

PARIS MARKETS IN TIME OF WAR

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Paris, Oct. 29.—It is worth while getting up before sunrise any of these chilly crisp autumn mornings to get a glimpse of "Les Halles," great market of Paris, between 6 and 9.

Through the Rue des Halles, Rue Saints Opportun and Place Saint Opportun, crowded with market carts, boxes and baskets you pick your way slowly among the crowd of sellers and buyers, wading through refuse and scattered straw, but in vain you look for the huge leather hats and the strong broad backs of the blonde elad market porters, or the muscular cart drivers who handle the heaviest bags as were they many feathers. These are all at the front.

Today only the old men remain, who rig themselves out with military caps and helmets to show that their hearts are with the young in the trenches, and the women, who are everywhere. It is women who have saved, planted and gathered all these vegetables that now fill the sidewalks way from the middle of the street and piled up to the first floor windows of the houses. There is dirt, of the fertile soil clinging to their skirts and their hands are horny with honest toil. The vegetables they sell are war provisions and they do it like queens among bags of potatoes, mountains of carrots, pyramids of beans and baskets full of ruddy apples and luscious pears. Fancy vegetables and the choicer kinds of fruits must wait until peace returns.

But what gives "Les Halles" their warlike appearance are the blue coats and the peering uniforms which lend a touch of new color to the scene. In their rows and columns of blue uniforms, young girls who have got up before sunrise are busily gaining everywhere. War has taught them that a son is a son and that it is necessary to make it buy the value of the two sons.

Then there are the soldiers, standing in little groups scattered throughout the buildings laughing and chatting. Zouaves in their picturesque scarlet bloomers and short braided coats, hospital attendants with their white brassards, infantry men and cavalrymen all buying and bargaining.

Then you see scores of women who have come here traveling at reduced rate in workmen's trains on the "metro" and whose white soft hands show that they are not used to working. They have come in cotton morning gowns, hunched over, with their heads tucked up under their plain bonnets and carrying big market baskets as they hurry from one dealer to another.

If you know Paris well you will recognize among them many of the leading women of Paris society, whose names are known throughout the world. Before the war they were considered rich, now they have turned over every penny twice before they spend it, to make both ends meet.

They are still living in apartments, costing thousands of francs a year in the neighborhood of the Champs Elysees or Faubourg St. Germain, but their husbands are in the trenches and no money is coming in. I saw a well known countess and her young daughter the other morning carrying an expensive traveling bag in red Russian leather into which they stuffed lettuce and beans, cabbage and carrots.

Another woman, the bearer of one of the proudest and oldest names of France, was shopping together with her cook when the latter discovered a bargain addressed her as "Madame."

"Madame, blushed and whispered: 'I tell you, Juliette, I shall have to pay double price for everything if you continue to address me as madame.'"

"I beg your pardon, madame," the cook answered, "but I cannot get into the habit of calling you anything else."

Their baskets filled they went away happy, and when they had got a short distance off madame put on her hat, which had been hidden in the basket, for she must not lose her reputation with the concierge, who must never know that she gets up at half past four in the morning and goes shopping herself to save a few sous.

Stone Ridge, Oct. 28.—Calvin Hinchon expects to have between five and six hundred barrels of fine apples from his young orchard this year.

Dr. Sherman has returned from a hunting trip to North woods.

The Rev. E. O. Switters of High Falls will occupy the pulpit of the Reformed Church on Sunday morning, in exchange with Dr. Cantine.

Miss Georgia Craft is spending a few days at her father's home in this town.

Mrs. Van Winkle expects to entertain the Camp Fire Girls at her home on Sunday evening.

The "Pineapple Club" of the Methodist Church will hold a Halloween social on Saturday evening.

NEXT AUTOMOBILE RACE.

High Speed Expected at Sheephead Bay Next Tuesday.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, Oct. 29.—Six of the best known automobile drivers in America are "tuning up" for that 100 mile dash that will be staged in the new Sheephead Bay Speedway on November 2.

It is expected that the average speed of the winner of that classic gasoline battle will be at least 110 miles an hour. The average speed for the 350 mile Astor Cup race on October 9 was around 102 miles an hour, but practically every entrant in that race averaged close to 110 miles an hour for the first 100 miles.

The drivers who so far have signified their intention of entering the race are: Mario Resta (Peugeot), Ralph De Palma (Mercedes), Barney Oldfield (Delage), Carl Cooper (Stutz), John Aitken or Howard Wilcox (Stutz), Eddie Rickenbacker (Maxwell), Bob Durnan (Peugeot), Jean Porpoise (Peugeot).

The winner of the race will get a $5,000 purse. Second place will pay $2,000, third place, $2,000, fourth, $1,000 and fifth place $500.

Why a Reading Community Progresses.

"I haven't much hope of a country which is not filled with people who read," writes Herbert Quick, editor of Farm and Fireside, in the current issue of the paper. "When I say read, I mean real reading. Everybody reads a little from a sense of duty—the daily paper, the farm paper, and occasionally a story or a book devoted to some special topic in which the reader is interested. But that is not real reading, because it is not done for the love of reading."

"The real reader reads because reading puts him in intimate relations with the greatest minds of all the ages. Darwin gives us the best of the mind of the greatest student of physical life who ever lived—a man so profound, so candid, so honest that reading his writings must make anyone a better man. Spencer is thought by many to be the greatest philosopher of all time. Emerson is one of those men who wrote out of real inspiration—a prophet, a living fire of the soul. Living is one who finds in life things to make us wonder why we could have passed them by, a genial, happy, clever interpreter of humanity, the American Charles Lamb. And there are dozens of such men and women who ask us from the shelves of every bookstore to step in and become acquainted. What a privilege! And such an acquaintance! We may know Plutarch better than his wife knew him. We may get more out of Thompson than was probably known by that dear friend of his for whom he wrote 'In Memoriam.' Writers put their whole souls into their books, and give only a part of themselves to their friends."

"We shall cease to be a great people just in proportion to our general failure to make friends with the great minds of the past and the great minds of the present."

BRICK ROADS GROW IN FAVOR

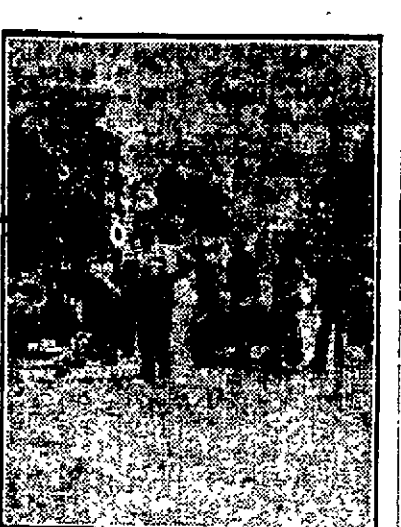

First Cost Is High, but They Are Durable.

AFFORD EASY TRACTION.

The United States Department of Agriculture Predicts a Rapid Increase in the Mileage of Vitrified Brick Roads and Points Out Their Advantages.

A rapid increase in the mileage of vitrified brick roads in this country is predicted in a new bulletin of the United States department of agriculture. Such roads, it is said, possess three distinct advantages—first, they are durable under all traffic conditions; second, they afford easy traction and moderately good foothold for horses, and, third, they are easy to maintain and keep clean. On the other hand, they are unquestionably expensive to construct, and the effort to reduce the high first cost frequently results in inferior construction and consequent defects.

The cost of a brick pavement depends so much upon so many variable factors, such as the locality, freight rates and the distance from brick kilns, that it is not possible to make any definite estimates. The cost of the rough grading, however, should be considered entirely apart from the cost of the payment, for the grading would have to be done, no matter what kind of road was to be built. Extending this item, the bulletin already mentioned (No. 249) furnishes the following formula as a rough guide for the probable expense of a brick road with a six inch concrete foundation and suitable grades: Cost per square yard, 1.90 L+213 C+138 S+157 A+.040 B.

The cost of a brick road with a six inch concrete foundation and suitable grades: Cost per square yard, 1.90 L+213 C+138 S+157 A+.040 B. This formula equals cost of cement per cubic yard. A equals cost of coarse aggregate per cubic yard. B equals cost of paving bricks per 1,000 and L equals cost of labor per hour. Thus if labor costs 25 cents an hour the labor cost per square yard of pavement will be 1.90 times 25 cents, or 47.50 cents. The cost of the cement per square yard will be .213 times the price of a barrel, and so on with the other items. It is assumed in this formula that all materials are delivered on the work. About 10 per cent should be allowed for wear on tools and machinery, and for every inch subtracted or added to the thickness of the foundation there will be a corresponding difference of 8 to 12 cents per square yard.

Paving bricks should be uniform in size, reasonably perfect in shape, tough in order to resist crushing, hard in order to resist abrasion and uniformly graded in order that the pavement may wear evenly. With good paving brick the crushing strength varies from 10,000 pounds to 20,000 pounds per square inch when the load is applied uniformly over the entire top surface of the test specimen. In use, however, paving brick is seldom called upon to withstand a pressure of over 2,000 pounds to the square inch, so that this factor is not one of great importance.

Equally important with the character of the brick is the character of the roadbed on which it is to be laid. The four essentials for the roadbed are thorough drainage, firmness, uniformity in grade and cross section and adequate shoulders. Where the first can be obtained in no other way it may be necessary to lift the road considerably above the surrounding land. Firmness is secured, if the road has been properly drained, by making certain that the roadbed is thoroughly compact. The subgrade must be repeatedly rolled and reshaped until the desired grade is secured. The shoulders should never be less than four feet wide, and not infrequently one is made sufficiently wide to form an earth roadway parallel to the brick pavement.

Strong, desirable curbing is necessary for all brick pavements in order to prevent the marginal brick from becoming displaced, which event would result in deterioration, finally spreading over the entire pavement. Properly constructed curbing, on the other hand, holds the bricks together and enables them to present a combined resistance. Portland cement and stone are probably the best materials to use.

FARM BOOKKEEPING.

We have little patience with a lot of the fads and frills and little niceties that are so often advocated for the farm and the farmer. Farm bookkeeping does not belong in the classes mentioned. It has its place on the farm, and the man who is not keeping books on his operations can do little more than guess at whether he is getting ahead or actually falling behind. There need be nothing elaborate about it. Some one of the family can easily master the essentials of keeping a set of books that will show everything necessary. A course in a good commercial college, even a short course, will make the task easier, but this is not necessary. A few minutes a day or half an hour once a week will be all that is needed to keep the books up.—Farm Progress.

OLD WHEAT FOR SEED.

When Carefully Stored It Is Better Than New For Seeding Purposes.

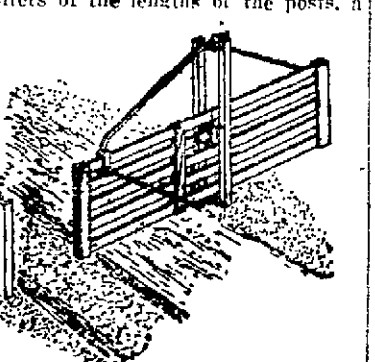

[Prepared by Kansas experiment station.] Old wheat that has been carefully stored will make better seed than most of the wheat that has been harvested this summer, according to L. E. Call of the Kansas State Agricultural college.

The agronomy department has received nearly 150 samples of wheat for germination tests. Samples have come from practically every section of the state. Old as well as new wheat was sent. Since these samples have been received twenty germination tests of all wheat have been completed and 109 tests of new wheat. The average per cent of germination for the old wheat crop of 1914 was 88, while the poorest sample of old wheat gave a test of 75 per cent. Practically all this wheat was strong enough in vitality to make seed of good quality. The average per cent of germination for the new wheat was only 98 per cent and a number of samples were secured where only 7 to 10 per cent of the kernels grew. Fully two-thirds of the samples of new wheat were so low in vitality that they were unfit for seed. These samples were obtained, as a rule, from lots of wheat that farmers had expected to plant and therefore represented usually the best wheat at the farmer's disposal.

"There is in most communities," said Mr. Call, "sufficient old wheat for seed. Where this grain has been properly stored it will make good seed and should as far as possible be planted. New wheat should not be planted unless it has been tested and is definitely known to be good."

"A germination test can be easily made. The wheat may be planted for a test in moist soil by hand or with drill or from 100 to 200 kernels may be rolled up in a moistened cotton band cloth and placed in a moderately warm room where the temperature will not fluctuate greatly and where the cloth will retain the moisture. The cloth should be moistened each day or as frequently as necessary. At the end of a week the kernels that have started to grow may be mounted out and the per cent of germination obtained. "Wheat that has good strong vitality will give a germination test of from 90 to 95 per cent. It is not advisable to plant wheat that has a germination test of less than 75 per cent unless better seed cannot be obtained. If wheat of low vitality is planted it should be sown at a correspondingly thicker rate."

Farm Gate.
Practical farm gates are always worth a second thought. Here is one recently patented by a California man. There are a keeper post and a pair of spaced diagonally offset posts, the gate being mounted in the space between the posts. Brackets connecting the posts are disposed at the ends and centers of the lengths of the posts, a stirrup being pivoted to the central bracket between the ends of this and straddling one of the gate rails and having a roller connected at its free end, on which the gate rail rides, to support the gate against downward movement. An upper and a lower bar are used as a hanger for the gate, this having a roller at the front end, which rides on the rail. The two pivotal points of hanger and the pivotal point of the stirrup are disposed in the same vertical plane.—Farming Business.

How Much Silage to Feed.

When cattle are fed on silage with no other roughage thirty pounds of the ration to each thousand pounds of animal is about the right amount a day, whether the herd is kept for beef or milk. This assumes that grain will be fed to balance the ration. Horses may be properly fed twenty pounds a day for each thousand pounds of horse. When cattle are fed on both silage and pasture fifteen pounds a day of silage to a thousand pounds of animal is a good ration. Sheep will safely take care of two pounds of silage a day for each member of the flock.

Flies.

Flies do not breathe through their mouths, but through holes in their bodies. Their eyes are made up of 4,000 facets. Flies are able to carry from sixty to seventy times their own weight.

THE FIRST TROUSERS.

They Led to Edicts Against Their Use in Some German States.

The latest instance of a European country enacting laws concerning dress occurred at the time of the French revolution, when some rulers of German states forbade their subjects to wear trousers, these being held to indicate revolutionary opinions. The elector of Hesse-Cassel, besides prohibiting the obnoxious garments, had the convicts employed on road sweeping dressed in trousers so as to inspire disgust for sans-culotte fashions.

The term "sans-culotte" means "without breeches," and during the French revolution the "sans-culottes," who denounced every one who wore breeches, finally went beyond their opponents and wore twice as much cloth around their legs—in a word, adopted the modern trousers and made them the badge of a party.

Napoleon wore trousers on state occasions after he had been crowned emperor. His army was the first that adopted trousers, and they kept progress, step by step, with the march of the French legions. The Duke of Wellington would insist on wearing pantaloons—or trousers, as they are now called—when he attended certain social functions, although he was almost alone in so doing. This was about the year 1814, but by 1830 trousers were worn by almost everybody.—Westminster Gazette.

THE BUDGET.

Those who cast their votes in favor of the adoption of the new constitution will be helping to provide New York with a businesslike and systematic plan for saving the state's money. It is notorious that the expenditures of the states of the Union have been reckless and extravagant. This has been due partly to geographical considerations which have resulted in a give and take policy in appropriations based on deals between legislators from different parts of the state. It has been due partly to the lack of official executive responsibility and the consequent fact that appropriations were often determined not by a state's needs or its ability to pay for an improvement, but because an individual legislator or party boss ordered it.

If the new constitution is adopted New York state will not only be taking a long step in the direction of putting its own house in order, but it will stand forth as a model in the state and nation.

The theory underlying the executive budget is not, as some critics would have us believe, a transfer of the power over the state's purse strings from the legislature to the governor. Rather it restores to the legislature what should be its proper functions of scrutiny and authorization in the expenditure of the state's money. At the same time it fixes the responsibility clearly on the executive, who must see that the money is properly expended.

Under this proposal the governor is required to frame the budget based on the estimates of his department heads. This budget must be submitted to the legislature by the first week in February, with the governor's recommendations and drafts of the bills to carry them out. This gives the legislature opportunity for scrutiny. The governor may appear before the legislature if he chooses to explain his recommendations. The legislature may, if it desires, call the governor or his department heads and interrogate them as to the necessity for the expenditure which he recommends. The legislature may thereafter cut from the appropriation bill such items as it does not deem necessary, but it may not increase the appropriations. The appropriation bill as passed becomes a law without the consent of the governor. Not until this budget is passed can the legislature consider any special or individual appropriation bill.

This reform would establish efficient and responsible government. In the first place, by placing on the governor the responsibility for his financial program and giving him an opportunity, which he has not heretofore had, of submitting a comprehensive plan for the state's expenditures and, in the second place, by giving the people, through their representatives in the legislature, the power to hold the governor and his appointees to a strict accounting for their acts.

Chinese Amulet.

One of the commonest amulets worn by an only son in China is a small silver lock, according to the authors of "The Book of Talismans." The father collects coins from about a hundred different kinds of families, and has them exchanged for silver, which is converted into a native padlock used to fasten a silver chain round the boy's neck. This, it is believed, will preserve him from evil spirits, lock him to life and contribute to his health and longevity.

NEEDS OF VARIOUS COUNTY ALMS HOUSES

To the State Board of Charities:

The undersigned, as a result of his recently completed annual visit to the almshouses of the Third Judicial District, asks the attention of the board to some matters affecting these institutions.

The annual reports of the commissioner for a number of years and the inspection reports have referred to necessary and desirable changes and improvements in some of the county houses, for one reason and another no action has been taken towards accomplishing results.

Without exception, in this district, the administrative, business and other officials have done excellently during the past year, and in the last few years there has been a marked and decided improvement in the administration, but in most instances only to a limited degree have the boards of supervisors fully met the situation.

It occurs to the undersigned to present to this board the question whether some action by it ought not to be taken towards securing action by the boards of supervisors by its own direct action or through its superintendent of state and alien poor. Perhaps the last mentioned officer might be requested either in writing or better still by personal attendance at the sessions of the several boards, and probably in connection with the county superintendent present the important and necessary matters. The particular instances in which some action is suggested are the following:

Albany County.

The greatest need here is a new almshouse. For years this has been recognized by all familiar with the situation. The present superintendent, like most of his predecessors in recent years, is convinced of the desirability of such a step. It is believed, too, that many of the county officials are prepared to consider a situation. It is confidently expected that the enhanced value of the land now used for this purpose, will produce nearly if not quite a sufficient sum to purchase adequate and desirable property, better located for the purpose and to construct modern buildings to supplant the outworn plant now so many years in use, and some of whose buildings are unfit for use. The matter of sale of the present almshouse farm has been mooted for many years. It is believed that the county authorities should be urged seriously to take up this question, as the present time seems to offer favorable opportunity in view of the enhanced value of the land and the desirability of new buildings and a new location seems no longer debatable.

Rensselaer County.

Practically the same conditions exist in Rensselaer county. While the buildings are not quite so old and badly worn as those in Albany, the proximity of the farm to the city results in very undesirable conditions. There are at almost all times, but always in the winter, a large number of apparently able bodied men who become temporary inmates of the almshouse, adding to its already overcrowded and unwholesome conditions, and most undesirable overcrowding, besides adding unduly to the expenses of the county. It is believed that if the almshouse were not quite so accessible, better discipline could be maintained, because further removed from alcohol and other temptations and would not prove so available or attractive to the unusual number of temporary and in many instances improper inmates.

The land has a great value for building purposes as the city has grown up around it, and it is believed that careful and thorough consideration by the board of supervisors will aid in accomplishing the removal of the institution to a farm where better provision can be made and a large part of the expense be borne by the realized value of the real estate to be sold.

Ulster County.

For a long time the commissioner's and inspectors' reports have shown and called attention to the pressing necessity of proper hospital facilities at this almshouse. Inadequate and improper hospital rooms are now located, one above the kitchen and one above the laundry. These are continually overcrowded owing to their inadequacy and are rendered not only unfavorable but unwholesome by reason of their location. The affairs of this almshouse have been greatly improved in recent years, but good administration is impossible unless hospital facilities are provided.

It is believed that both the superintendent and the keeper will aid in every way in presenting the matter earnestly to the board of supervisors, and it is hoped that with the influence of the board successful results as above indicated, will follow.

Sullivan County.

While the situation, for many years unsatisfactory, has somewhat improved in Sullivan county, and the present superintendent and keeper are entitled to great credit for the advancement made, there are radical changes highly desirable, to which the attention of the board of supervisors should be called.

It would be preferable to sell, which could be done advantageously, the present site, and secure another and construct buildings better adapted, but if the present site and buildings are to be maintained some radical changes are desirable. The superintendent and keeper are both anxious to improve the classification of the almshouse, and have done much towards meeting this, but with the present buildings, it is almost hopeless to expect any great improvement. It is confidently believed that the board of supervisors will take some measures to improve the conditions in this county.

It is therefore respectfully requested that the board consider the questions here presented, and if they agree with the views of the undersigned, it is confidently expected that some action will be taken in the interest of effective and practical work by this board, and that its influence be used in a direction which will accomplish desirable results in the improvement of almshouses and their administration in this state.

Respectfully submitted,
Signed: SIMON W. ROSENTHAL,
Commissioner Third Judicial District,
Albany, N. Y., October 22, 1915.

GEORGE SCHICK.

The renomination of Alderman George Schick shows the confidence which the people of the Third ward have in him. Mr. Schick has done good work for his ward since entering the council and his voice is always raised in protecting the interests of the taxpayers not alone of his own section but of the entire city. He has stood firmly since entering the board of aldermen for strict economy but at the same time has always been willing to see the city progress in the line of needed improvements. There are many small property owners in his ward who have looked to him to scrutinize every bill for the purpose of keeping taxes down to a level consistent with good government and in that they have not been disappointed. His return to the council would be a deserved compliment for active service in behalf of his constituents. Recently Mr. Schick is a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Engineers, being employed on the Ulster & Delaware Railroad, and is also a member of Kingston Lodge No. 19, F. & A. M., Charles DeWitt Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, and Kingston Lodge, Loyal Order of Moose.

ELLENVILLE.

Ellenville, Oct. 29.—The Rev. George E. Barber, D. D., of Kingston will occupy the pulpit of the Reformed Church on Sunday.

I Am Perfectly Satisfied!

That is a simple phrase, but to feel that way, when you are buying Cloaks, Waists, Skirts and Furs is a matter that requires foresight and good judgment.

If we could read to you some of the letters that we receive from our customers, expressing their satisfaction of their purchase at our store you would be anxious to number yourself as one of our customers.

A school teacher from Saugerties in her letter to us said: "The memory of the cloth and style remains long after the price is forgotten."

Another lady from High Falls writes:

"The only trouble I find with garments purchased at your store is that I can't wear them out."

Letters of that character that we receive daily, are evidence of our ability to please trade.

WE want you to compare our merchandise with others as to material, as to style and as to our Popular price.

One ounce of that kind of comparison is worth a ton of argument.

If you will obey that impulse you will find yourself satisfied with our merchandise as thousands of others are.

Remember, we advertise only what we have and exactly as it is.

FREDERICK WIEDEMANN.

To elect Frederick Wiedemann, the Republican candidate for supervisor in the Fourth ward, would be a long step toward wiping out woeful Democratic inefficiency in the county legislature. Mr. Wiedemann is a man of particular fitness for the office he seeks and is entitled to the serious consideration of the voters of the Fourth ward, where he is well and favorably known. He has been a life-long resident of Kingston and has always been considered a citizen of sterling character. Mr. Wiedemann is thoroughly familiar with the needs of the city and county, and can be depended upon to discharge the duties of supervisor in a careful, painstaking manner. Mr. Wiedemann needs no praise from this newspaper. His spotless record will weigh heavily in his favor among the voters of his ward. Friends of Mr. Wiedemann's who are of a prophetic turn of mind predict that he will be the next supervisor from the Fourth ward.

The Onion.

The onion has been so long in cultivation that its original form is not definitely known. There are so called wild onions that grow in the woods. Nobody ever tastes them but once, and there is about the taste no suggestion that cultivation or anything else could ever make them grateful to the human palate. In all probability the onion is a native of western Asia and adjacent parts of Africa since it is mentioned in old Egyptian writings and the Pentateuch.

WEALTH MADNESS.

I wish that more of us had the courage to be poor, that the world had not gone mad after fashion and display, but so it is, and the blessings we might have are lost in the effort to get those which lie outside the possible.—Carey.

A Farm 100 Feet Under the Ground.

Operating a mushroom farm 100 feet under the surface of the earth is the pleasant and profitable experience of William Krumlaugh, an Ohio farmer, according to an article in the current issue of Farm and Fireside, the national farm paper published in Springfield, Ohio.

Here is an extract from the account about Krumlaugh's farm:

"Two years ago he began growing mushrooms in beds located in the worked-out rooms and entries of a small coal mine on his farm. The mushrooms net more than the coal during the winter months. First he planted 150 square feet to test out the plan. Now he has 1,000 square feet of mushroom beds.

"They mix fresh manure with straw, wet it down and let it stand four or five weeks. Spawn is then broken up in small pieces and mixed with the manure and straw. Then it is piled into coal cars and hauled 400 yards into the mine to the beds which are 100 feet under the ground. Leaf mold is placed on top of the manure and spawn to a depth of 1½ inches. "Within ten weeks the mushrooms raise themselves above the loam. Their delicately fragile pink-and-whiteness blooms weirdly in the darkness."

"These mushrooms are picked when they are three inches high. Every two or three days a new crop is ready for market. They are packed in boxes and are sold to restaurants and hotels. The nearest market pays 35 cents a pound. The mushrooms marketed in Pittsburgh and Chicago bring nearly twice that price."

Circles of Mercy Begin Work

There was a generous response to the appeal appearing in The Freeman for old cloth for the war relief work to be undertaken by the Circles of Mercy in this city, considerable material being taken to the Y. M. C. A. building on Wednesday and Thursday mornings. Mrs. George Hutton, the president, presided at the Thursday morning meeting of the various chairman of the circles. It was announced that all of the work which the Circles of Mercy propose to do, would be sent through the French League rooms to Europe, and would, therefore, be for the wounded soldiers of the allies. Material was given out for the different circles to begin work with, and they were furthermore instructed as to what and how to proceed. Additional gifts of old cloth, sheets, pillow cases, towels, table linen, etc., all clean and unstarched; old comfortables and quilts, also clean, and any other clean, old cloth, will be needed for next Thursday morning. Gifts of money, no matter how small the donations, will also be most acceptable, as some new material must be purchased. The next meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. building, next Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock, when materials will be received; finished articles will be turned in, and additional materials will be given out to the workers.

MILITARY ZONE ON TEXAS BORDER

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 29.—A military zone with martial law within it is expected to be created along the Texas border in the next few days. Villa's army is disintegrating. Many of his soldiers are expected to try to cross the Rio Grande and carry on a campaign of rapine on American soil. To prevent this General Funston, under supreme authority from the war department, is disposing his troops so that every avenue can be guarded. He is expected to confer with Gov. Ferguson of Texas and secure the aid of state officials to exercise martial law over all sections where brigandage might be attempted.

Even though the Villa forces at Agua Prieta should defeat those of Carranza, Villa's star will not be permitted to go into the ascendancy, officials say. The administration has withheld its weapons to the Carranza star and must stand or fall by the success of Carranza's efforts.

Villa already has been deserted by most of the men who have been known as the "brains" of his movement. These include: General Felipe Angeles, his first lieutenant and the best soldier in Mexico, Miguel Diaz Lombardo, his former provisional president, Gen. Roque Gonzalez Garza and his personal representative in Washington, Enrique C. Lorente.

These men have announced that they intend remaining quietly in the United States, and will not accept amnesty at the hands of Carranza. Neither will they aid any further revolutionary movement against Carranza. And without them the state department believes Villa cannot conduct a successful rebellion for any length of time.

Official reports received here today place Villa's present forces at 10,000 men. He has several months supply of munitions but the confidential agents of the state department say that the morale of his forces has been broken by the steady retreat of 1,500 miles from Celaya and that even though they win initial skirmishes against General Calles, the Carranzista commander, they cannot maintain a strong offensive for any length of time.

RILEY'S FIRST POEM.

Former Kingston Man to Help Out on Post's Biography.

William H. Winton, now residing in Rochester, N. Y., and connected with the Post-Express, some 25 years ago business manager of The Freeman, figures in the following article from the Post-Express:

Business was dull in the office of the old Indianapolis "Journal" that morning, as it frequently was, and Cashier George C. Hitt and Advertising Manager William H. Winton found plenty of time to scrutinize and comment upon the few strangers who came in for the transaction of business.

Dusk was hiding the approach of night—an Indiana night—when a tall, spare, modest frame surmounted by a shock of sandy hair was propelled down the stairway from the editorial room and across to the cashier's cage. Clattering to a stop, the figure straightened up jerkily and a hand clutching a bit of paper was thrust in under the nose of the startled Cashier Hitt. An order from Colonel Elijah W. Hartford to pay cash for a contribution—a familiar form to Hitt.

He paid out a few bills, and then, while the sandy-haired youth turned away to count them over carefully before thrusting them into a pocket of his woofly-wrinkled trousers, he turned to Winton to explain.

"That's young Riley," he said, with a wink. "He got fifteen dollars for a poem of some kind. Looks more like a painter than a poet, doesn't he?"

Beginning of Life-work.

Both men laughed at the witicism, but the little old man who sits on the hills beyond the horizon and peers through a crystal far, far into the future must have been moved to even greater mirth. For the "painter-poet" was James Whitcomb Riley, and that first poem was the beginning of a life-work that was destined to make him the most beloved figure in modern American literature.

The shock-headed, merry-eyed Hoosier lad who thrust the fifteen-dollar order through the wicket was the man who penned the immortal line, "When the frost is on the pumpkin," to which Americans the world over will answer, unhesitatingly, "And the fender's in the shock."

Time has changed many things since that morning—changed everything, in fact, save the God-given gift of homely word building that was hidden under the sandy hair and gaunt frame of the Hoosier poet. Winton, who grinned at the eagerness of the young verse-maker to get the $15 safely stowed away, is now connected with the business office of The Post-Express. To Hitt, the cashier, has been dedicated Riley's latest book of verse, "An Old Sweetheart of Mine." And Lieutenant-Colonel Elijah W. Hartford editor of the "Journal," is now a resident of New York city.

Then 24 Years of Age.

It was in 1877 that Mr. Riley's first poem was sold, and he was then but twenty-four years of age. The month had scarcely elapsed when his sixty-second birthday, such a tribute as few men of note in the world of letters have lived to see. The famous "brother" of Riley's home was attended by men of world-wide prominence, delighting to honor the man who, said George Ade, put the Hoosiers among the civilized races.

Mr. Winton, unable to attend the dinner, sent a note of congratulation, and the following is his reply: "You greetings for Mr. Riley's birthday gave him special pleasure, recalling as it did, yourself and the old, old days on the old 'Journal.' He thanks you heartily for your letter."

"I am preparing a biography of Mr. Riley, who is my uncle, and I solicit your help, because in your mind are some very precious memories of the 'Journal' days. If anyone you could tell me how much Mr. Riley was paid on that first occasion, I would be most grateful.

Likewise, you will be of special service to the permanent record if you will set down your impressions of that critical day of his early career. For your help I shall be very grateful.

(Signed) EDMUND H. EITEL," Mr. Winton, who lives at 393 Hayward avenue, will comply with the request.

Good reasons must, of course, give place to better.—Shakespeare.

Worth Knowing.

Every housekeeper knows that in a small household where only one or two servants are kept, several guests over Sunday mean a great deal of work—manual labor for the domestics and head work and responsibility for the hostess. If things are to go smoothly and hospitality is to be perfectly expressed somebody has got to do a deal of thinking and preparing beforehand and this somebody is, naturally, the housekeeper and hostess.

Wealth in India.

Immense fortunes in India are in jewels, but there is no authoritative method of computation of the extent of this form of wealth. The Imperial Gazetteer of India described 50 years ago a shawl of pearls, with an arabesque border of diamonds, rubies, sapphires and emeralds, valued at $5,000,000. There are tales of carpets of pearls and great diamonds which have become world-famous.

DON'T BE A QUITTER

The man who lays down when he meets adversity is the one who falls. It's easy to hold your head high when all is going well, but the fellow who succeeds is the one who holds his head high when things seem to be going dead against him.

Now The Freeman Want Ads provide an ever present means of helping the man and woman in the business world to keep their heads high, when luck seems to have deserted them.

Go to The Freeman Want Ads when you need a job, or money for your business, or a purchaser for your property, or anything else that you may stand in need of. They will quickly supply it for you.

NO ARRESTS IN PEABODY HORROR

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Peabody, Mass., Oct. 29.—Investigation today in the ruins of St. John's parochial school where yesterday's fire cost the lives of 21 little girls made certain these facts: That the fire started in a closet or small room under the stairs, where sweepings, broken desks and the like were stored.

That there was no criminal negligence such as would justify an arrest in the case.

That the school building met all legal requirements in the line of precautions against such a holocaust.

Deputy Chief George C. Neal of the state police added to the certainties the guess that boys playing with matches in the basement may have been the immediate cause of the fire.

"In so large a school," he said, "where there are more than 300 boys you can never be sure what they will do."

A solemn high mass of requiem for the victims of the fire will be held tomorrow in St. John's Church. This was the announcement of the Rev. Nicholas Murphy, rector of the church and head of the school.

The funeral services in the church, services which will be held jointly for all the victims—will be followed by the burial services which will probably be in most cases in St. Mary's cemetery.

The investigation and inspection of the ruins today was conducted by Deputy Chief Neal, William F. Murphy, the Essex county inspector of the state fire marshal's office; J. B. Graham, consulting hazard engineer; Jesse Barrett, chief of the Peabody fire department and Walter Wedger, explosion expert of the state police.

At the conclusion of a careful tour of the ruins deputy Neal made this statement:

"I can see no criminal negligence anywhere in connection with this fire. There will be no arrests. There is no need to arrest."

"The fire started in a closet under the stairs where the broken furniture and barrels of sweeping were stored. Nearly half of the pupils in this school were boys. You never can tell what boys will do."

"Concerning the matter of fire escapes—the law did not compel the installation of fire escapes provided there was more than one exit."

"In this case there were two exits. The space in the exits is figured out on the basis of so much to each pupil. In this school actual test has shown that the building could be emptied in ninety seconds."

"The loss of life was caused by the fact that flames swept up through the doorway from the cellar and cut off escape by the front door causing panic."

"Most of those who died were suffocated; they were dead before the flames reached them."

Today's investigation made sure of the fact that the boiler did not explode; for the one school room, the whole building that was not touched by the fire was the fourth grade, on the ground floor just above the boiler room.

This room housed a class of boys in charge of Sister Mary Lucia. Today in this room the slates and books were in their ordered places, on the desks, the room was scrupulously in order, yet with the marks of its swift abandonment.

Upon the blackboard a childish hand had written:

"Hope is a divine virtue, by which we firmly trust God will give us eternal life and the—"

There the writing trailed away for there had come the interruption of the fire going signal.

Two more bodies were identified today. Dr. Fox, a dentist, was able to identify dental work done for one little girl as Petronella Chebator.

The other was Katherine Compans, 12.

Three bodies remain unidentified.

BATTLE CENTERS AROUND NISH

By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, Oct. 29.—A great battle for the possession of Nish, long the Serbian capital, is developing.

Bulgarian armies are driving against Nish from the north and east while the German and Austro-Hungarian forces are slowly pressing the Serbs into the mountains south and southwest of Belgrade.

West of Strumitza, and along the Salonika Nish railway south of Veles the bloodiest fighting of the campaign has developed. Bulgarian, Turkish, Serbian, French and British troops are engaged.

Underestimating the strength of the allied forces, the Bulgarians were forced out of their strong positions and now, with Turkish reinforcements are fighting desperately to recover them.

Anglo-French forces are striving with might and main to cut their way through to Nish to reinforce the Serbian army defending that city. If Nish falls the Germans will have uninterrupted railway communication from Berlin to Constantinople.

While fighting on Serbian territory, Bulgaria is feeling the iron grip of war on her own soil. In addition to the French invasion near Strumitza, the Black Sea and Aegean Sea coasts are kept under an intermittent bombardment by allied warships. Varna, Bourgas and Dedeaq have been nearly destroyed.

Russian aeroplanes have attacked Varna from the air and also shelled the railway leading into the port from the west.

POLITICAL ADVERTISING.

Publication of It in No Way Reflects Paper's Policy.

Political advertising through the newspapers has become a feature of political campaigns during the past few years, and this year is no exception to the rule. While the matter advertised may be contrary to the policy of the newspaper, as long as it is not objectionable in form the newspaper cannot show discrimination if it carries political advertising of any sort.

For this reason The Freeman published on Thursday evening two advertisements which called attention to the candidacy of William C. DeWitt, the Democratic candidate for county clerk.

By publishing these advertisements The Freeman did not in any way sanction Mr. DeWitt's election, to which it is consistently opposed. The Freeman believes that Christopher K. Loughran, the Republican candidate, should be elected county clerk and believes that the interests of the county will best be served by his election, and that Mr. DeWitt should be defeated.

The political advertisement for Mr. DeWitt was accepted and printed in the same way that the advertisement of any dry goods or grocery store is accepted and printed and it in no way expresses the policy or the belief of The Freeman, which is strongly in favor of Mr. Loughran's election because of his acknowledged and marked efficiency. The Freeman believes that the voters also will take the same view and by their votes on Tuesday will elect him because he is "The Man Who is on His Job."

Long on Opinions; Short on Facts.

Unless Dr. Diedling, of the state prison commission, specifically mentions in what respect the reforms which are being tried at Sing Sing are detrimental to the inmates, his fling at Warden Osborne will receive scant attention. There may be some truth in what he says, but the commissioner ought to realize that unless he deals more with facts and less in general criticisms, no great number of people are going to accept his word as to the harm he says the experiments are doing.

The commissioner apparently has no patience whatever with anybody who approves changing the iron discipline of prison rule. He has no use for those he terms "professional reformers." He thinks societies which watch over the prisons of the state are meddlesome and harmful, but here again he expresses an opinion without submitting instances to prove his charge.

The commissioner's statement seems to have been made chiefly to irritate, not to convince.—Brooklyn Standard Union.

Bulgarian Forts Damaged.

Petrograd, Oct. 29.—Forts defending Varna the chief Bulgarian port on the Black Sea, were badly damaged by the bombardment of the Russian warships. It was officially announced today. While the Bulgarian city was under fire German submarines appeared and tried to attack the Russian ships, but were driven off.

PLAY FOR THE GRIDIRON CHAMPIONSHIP

Thompson of the Yale 1915 Football Squad—Ellis Hard at Work Shaping a Championship Team.

(By FRANK G. MENKE)

Wouldn't it be a great boon to football if the big colleges in the East formed a conference such as exists in the West and then, at the end of each season, the winner of the East played the winner of the West for the gridiron championship of the country?

Year after year the question of whether the eastern champion is superior to the western goes unsettled. The Easterner contends that eastern footballers are the peer of any in the West; the West scolds at such an idea and claims that any of the crack western eleven could smother the best in the East. And there you are—arguments pro and con, day after day, year after year—and the great question is a question still.

Even if the eastern colleges didn't want their champion to play the title holder of the West, it would be a great thing for football if nine of the big colleges in the East formed a league, arranged a schedule among themselves and settled each year beyond the possibility of dispute, the question of real supremacy in the East.

In years gone by Yale, Harvard and Princeton were looked upon as the only colleges that were entitled to fight for the championship. It seemed show a record superior to any other college eleven in the East.

How simple it would be—and how satisfying to the lover of the gridiron game—if the big eleven in the East did form a league, battle largely among themselves, as they do in the West, and conclusively settle the championship each year.

The western conference consists of nine colleges: Illinois, Chicago, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Ohio State, Purdue, Indiana and Northwestern. Most of the teams play each other every year—and the championship problem is made easy in solution. Last year Illinois won the championship—won it undisputedly. Chicago's record was next best and Chicago got second place. The ranking order of the other teams is as they read at the top of this paragraph.

Why not such a league in the East with these nine colleges entered. Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Dartmouth, Pittsburgh, Army, Navy, Cornell and Pennsylvania. All these colleges now observe the one year eligibility rule, which bars the playing of freshman. Every team in such a league would show up well, and the fight ought to be a close one.

There isn't much doubt but what six of those colleges—Army, Navy, Dartmouth, Cornell, Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania—would agree to such a plan because there is real sportsmanship at those institutions—and no snobbishness. But the one time "Big Three" would prove the stumbling block for a time. They've become so used to thinking in Yale, Harvard and Princeton that they are the high lords of football that the idea is deep rooted—and it would be a hard job to extract it.

But it can be done if enough pressure is brought to bear—and it should be done for the sake of the great college game.

LOSES BY EARLY KNOCK-OUT

Toledo Featherweight Gets $2.10 for Fight That Was Scheduled to Go Twelve Rounds.

Roger O'Malley, the Toledo featherweight, tells this yarn:

"A few years ago I landed up in Prince Rupert, a town in British Columbia. The manager of one of the clubs there asked me if I wanted to fight twelve rounds with some Canadian battler.

"Yes," I said. "What do I get for it?"

"Twenty-five dollars for a twelve-round fight is the best I can give you," said the manager. "We only can draw a few hundred people here."

"Well, I'd been getting $300 to $600 for my fights through that section, but I decided that $25 was $25 and that it would pay my hotel bill in that town, so I consented to go on."

"I knocked out the other fellow in the first round. After the show was over I hunted up the manager."

"I'd like to have my money," I told him.

"Oh, sure," he said, and he hands me two $1 bills and a dime.

"What's the matter here?" I asked. "I was to get $25 and you're giving me only $2.10."

"That's all right, ain't it?" he answered.

"No, it ain't," I said. "I'm $22.90 shy."

"You're getting all that is coming to you," returned the manager. "The agreement was for you to box twelve rounds for $25. That's an average of about $2.10 per round, ain't it? You knocked that guy out in the first and so you get paid only for the time you worked—one round."

SUSPECTS IN GERMAN BOMB CONSPIRACY AND MATERIALS FOUND AMONG THEIR EFFECTS.

The picture shows some of the bomb making materials found in the room of Robert Fay, who with Walter I. Schulz and Paul Jacob, were under arrest, suspected of being the leaders in a conspiracy to blow up munition ships leaving New York and factories making munitions for the allies. Fay is said to be a Lieutenant in the German army. Schulz is a German reservist and Deache said he was a graduate of the University of Cologne. All three are under arrest at Weehawken, N. J. A high powered motorboat, together with bomb making materials, several bombs and a map of New York harbor were also discovered by the police and secret service men who have been following the men for several weeks.

Mutiny in Bulgarian Army.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

MARQUIS OF LANSDOWNE.

CABINET MEMBER WHO ATTACKS BRITISH POLICY IN SERBIA.

Great Britain is stirred over the remarks of the Marquis of Lansdowne, who holds a seat in the cabinet without portfolio, made at a meeting of the House of Lords at which the Balkan situation was under discussion. Lord Lansdowne said that it was highly improbable that the Serbian army could withstand for any great length of time the attacks to which it is exposed from the Austro-German forces, and that the British had landed but 13,000 men at Salonika as a relief expedition to the Serbians.

Lord Cromer also showed dissatisfaction at the manner in which the Balkan policy is being carried out.

A Grim Cathedral.

Once the capital of the kingdom of Portugal, Coimbra possesses a number of interesting monuments. Its cathedral dates from the early period when it upon the west, Toledo in the center and Saragossa on the east were the Christian outposts against the infidel. Its color, a deep golden brown, is like that of an old warrior tanned by the wars. Squarely seated upon its platform, its walls pierced only by narrow windows that resemble loopholes, its roofs and parapets embattled, it recalls the day when praying and fighting went hand in hand and its rough hewn stones breathe it as in a bronze cuirass chased with the delicate tracery of its south door adiel at a later epoch. Its interior, too, is severely plain, though adorned with the only fine rearedos that I saw in Portugal, and with side chapels that contain a notable array of old blue tiles.—Ernest Peixotto in Scribner's.

Hiding Behind Smoke.

The accuracy of modern naval gunnery is so marvelous that the only hope for a ship to escape being sunk when within range of the guns is to hide itself. That is easier said than done, however, and there is only one way in which it can be done, and that is by means of a "smoke screen." It is hard for one ship to hide herself behind her own smoke unless the wind is favorable, but for a number of ships to put a huge fog of black smoke between them and their pursuers is comparatively easy. The smoke is caused by oil fuel, and it can be turned off or on at will by supplying more or less air to the furnaces. It is so dense and black that it is quite impossible to see more than a few yards through it.—Pearson's Magazine.

Hawking in the Old Days.

Falconry, or hawking, was a favorite sport with the nobility and gentry of Europe down to the first half of the seventeenth century. Hawks were trained to mount and pursue game and bring it to their masters and mistresses, coming and going to the call of the latter with marvelous docility. The hawks were tricked out with gay hoods and held until ordered to pursue the quarry, or game, by leathern straps fastened with rings of leather about each leg just above the talons, and with silken cords called "jesses" to each of these leathern straps, or "be- wets," was attached a small bell. In the flight of hawks it was often so arranged that the bells made a "concert of sweet sounds."

NO WET OR DRY VOTE IN MARLBOROUGH

The question of whether the town of Marlborough shall be "wet" or "dry" will hardly be submitted to the voters of that town on Tuesday, although the ballots have been printed and are in possession of William F. Spratt, the town clerk of Marlborough, as Judge Hasbrouck this noon granted an injunction restraining the town clerk from delivering the ballots on election day, as the petition to submit the question at this election which had been drawn up by the no license people of the town was defective on its face and did not comply with the requirements of the statute.

While the "drys" of the town were busy circulating the petition which was filed with the town clerk the "wets" in the person of James McGowan of Marlborough, who has a large hotel in that village and holds a liquor license, secured the services of the law firm of Wallace, O'Neill & Greaney of Newburgh, and an order to show cause why the injunction restraining the town clerk from delivering the ballots was made returnable before Judge Hasbrouck at the court house today.

Town Clerk Spratt was represented at the hearing today by Attorney John B. Ball of Milton, with Corporation Counsel William D. Brimmer of counsel.

It was brought out that at the last preceding election there was 884 votes cast in the town of Marlborough, and that in order to submit the question of whether the town should be "wet" or "dry" it was necessary to secure at least 83 votes to sign the petition requesting that the no license question be submitted to the voters on Tuesday.

The petition which was filed contained the required 89 names, but it was brought out that one of the signers of the petition was not a citizen and that the other had not acknowledged his signature before a notary public, as required by law.

This manifestly made the petition invalid on the face of it and the facts as set forth by the attorneys for Mr. McGowan were not disputed. This does not prevent the "drys" from circulating another petition, but as that takes time and election is held on Tuesday, it is hardly likely that the question will be submitted to the voters this year at least and the "wets" have won another victory in the town of Marlborough.

W. J. JUNEAU.

HEADED FOR WESTERN CHAMPIONSHIP.

It has been some time since the University of Wisconsin has won a football championship, but the team this year under Coach W. J. Juneau, who a few years ago was one of the real gridiron stars, looks to have the championship. So far the Wisconsin team has not lost a game. They defeated Lawrence, 22 to 0 and on the following Saturday ran up a score of 35 to 0 against Marquette. On October 17, against the Purdue eleven, they scored 28 points to Purdue's 3 and last Saturday defeated Ohio State 21 to 6. Any eleven that can score 216 points to their opponent's 3 in four games, is a mighty hard football team to beat.

Wisconsin has yet to meet Minnesota and Chicago, both of which have strong teams this year, but Juneau has confidence in his team and believes that he will win the Western Conference title this year.

The Calaveras Skull. Of interest in connection with tertiary gold bearing river gravels of California is the story of the Calaveras skull. For a time this skull attracted much attention not only from the people of California but from men the world over. It was reported to have been found in 1896 near the town of Angels, Calaveras county, at a depth of 150 feet, in tertiary gravels underlying tertiary lava. The finding of a human skull embedded in such deposits was for a time believed to indicate that man had been in existence in North America longer than had been supposed. Strange to say, the skull is of a higher type than skulls which, although known to antedate historic times, are known also to be much younger than the tertiary. Although Professor J. D. Whitney, then state geologist, accepted the skull as a bit of genuine scientific evidence, it is generally believed by students of the antiquity of man that the Calaveras skull, while undoubtedly old, probably did not come from the auriferous gravels at all.—Argonaut.

State Department Code.

The secret code books of the state department are guarded most carefully. Life is to be expended at any time to defend them. In fact they are guarded as carefully as the code books of the navy, whose covers are so heavy that when thrown into the sea in case of emergency they will sink instantly.—Leslie's.

HIDE YOUR WORRIES.

A man should feel the obligation to bring gaiety into the lives of all those whom he loves. The fact that the routine of the day has been dull doesn't excuse him for being glum and silent at his evening meal.—Arthur S. Pier.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

"The Federal League," Ban Johnson said in his high nasal whine, "is beaten to a frazzled pulp. It's doggone dead this time. 'Arise, Embalmers! Rise! Wake up! A corpse demands your care!'"

The "undies" waked, they rubbed their eyes. To Ban they did declare, "Phooie, Phooie, aah aah aah, 'Your fall is but a joke, 'Go away from us, we let us alone, 'You mirth provoking bloke!"

The mention of the name of Fred Fulton, heavy weight, may not fill with terror the hearts of his ring fans, but the mention of his record, 54½ inches, surely must terrify the boarding house keepers who are on Fulton's calling list.

"Marvellous" Discovery.

A New York scribe solemnly informs the populace that, "Positive information was obtained yesterday to prove the assertion that Governor Whitman is strongly in favor of clean boxing."

"Can you imagine him being in favor of any other kind of boxing?" "I will not play with the Giants if I am traded," says Henrie the Zim Zim probably wants to forecast the rulings of the umpires.

Wireless telegraphy was used in sending to the University in Iowa the news that the football eleven had won a 9 to 6 victory over Northwestern. And Northwestern turn the regular wins.

John L. Sullivan has redeemed for $5,000 the diamond belt given to him by admirers in 1887 and which he "knocked" a few years later for $4,000. John probably will use it as a setting for a wrist watch.

O'Loughlin, unable to penetrate mob, approaches policeman.

O'Loughlin (yelling): "Say, officer! Oh, I say there, officer! Clear a way for me to the gate, will ya?"

Officer: "What's that?"

O'Loughlin (cupping hands and shouting above a tumult): "I say, clear a way for me. I wanta get into the park. I gotta get in. I'm Mr. O'Loughlin—ow of the umpires 'y'no old fellow!"

Officer (sneering-like): "Oh-ho, so yez are O'Loughlin, the umpire, hey? Another wan of them O'Loughlins, hey—the twelfth umpire O'Loughlin that's requested me so far today to get him through the crowd. I got the first wan up to the gate at the risk of my life but yez'll have to do what the other nineteen did—get there yerself!"

"Chief" Newbury, who was a wonder as a ballback on the freshman team at Syracuse and who was still this year, has divorced. The coaches say he is too good natured. Why not put him on a raw meat diet?"

This is the latest story they tell on John McGraw, concerning his unsuccessful efforts to secure John Reilly, star third baseman for Yale, as third sacker for the Giants.

"I'll give you a job at $5,000 a year to play for my team," said Jawn to John.

"Kind sir," said John to Jawn, "I cannot accept because I am going to take a job in the New York subway at 20 cents an hour."

"But, my boy," said Jawn to John, "if you work 10 hours a day every day in the year you'll get only about $750 from the subway job. I offer you $5,000 to work two hours for six months."

"But I want to work underground," objected Reilly.

"I'm offering you a cellar job—I'm asking you to play with the Giants, ain't I?" Jawn is quoted as answering.

Entered in Bowling League.

The local Y. M. C. A. has entered a team in the New York Bowling League this year and the first games will be held on November 10 or 11, on the association days. Last year the association had a team entered and at the close of the league were in seventh place. Considering the fact that there were teams entered from all over the state the local association made a fine showing. This year they expect to do even better. Each team entered in the league will roll on their own axes and the results will be telephoned into headquarters at Syracuse.

FIRST BASKETBALL GAME TONIGHT

Kingston will have its opening of the new professional Interstate Basketball League at the local armory this evening, when the team which is to represent Company M will clash with Manager Downey's fast Patterson quintet. The locals will lineup with Ed. Wachter, Johnson and Schmoeck forwards, Tome, center; Barger and Henschel guards. This combination ought to land the pennant in the new league, this being the best team that could be picked from two players in the game. With Brother Ed. Wachter as captain, the locals will be led on to many a victory under his keen eye. Wachter, without a doubt, is the best basketball player in the world, having earned this title during the years of the Hudson River and New York State League.

Stanford Wins Opening Game.

Stanford defeated Jersey City in the opening game of the new professional Interstate Basketball League in the Elk's Hall, Jersey City, last night by 21 to 20. At the end of the regulation forty minutes of play the score was tied at 20 all and in the extra period a foul cost Jersey City the game. Mayor Facon of Jersey City threw out the ball. The hall was jammed.

Foul play proved the undoing of the Skeweters, for it gave Stanford a chance to score thirteen points. In the first half, Stanford was unable to cage a single goal from scrimmage, and time found the Connecticut live on the short end of a 9 to 3 score. J. E. Full, former University Settlement star, playing guard for Jersey City, held Norman, formerly of Manual Training High School, Brooklyn, scoreless. The lineup:

Jersey City (20). Stanford (21).
Reich L. F. Norman
Newman R. F. Barry
Biggame L. G. Taylor
Wright C. Smilh
Fuller R. G. Dreyfuss, Hogan

Score at the half—Jersey City, 8; Stanford, 3. Field goals—Reich, Newman (3.) Wright (2.) Biggame, Barry, Smith, Dreyfuss (2.) Goals from foul—Reich (3.) Newman, Fuller, Norman (7.) Barry, Smith (1.) Dreyfuss. Referee—Ward Brennan. Times of halves—20 min. utes.

CULLOTON CAPTAIN OF FRESHMEN TEAM

Bernard A. Culloton of this city has been elected captain of the freshman football team of Columbia University and his many friends in Kingston will be pleased to hear of his athletic success. "Bud" Culloton graduated from Clister Academy in the class of 1915 and has entered Columbia. While at Clister he made a record along athletic lines and was not only one of the best football players that ever attended Clister, but he was also the academy's star pitcher. He was one of the first to respond when the call went out this year for football material at Columbia, and his playing soon attracted the attention of the freshman class at the university resulting in his election as captain of the team. His friends believe that before his college course is completed that Culloton will have won his letter and have become a valued addition to the varsity team.

HOW FOLWELL BEAT YALE.

Bob Folwell, Coach of Washington and Jefferson.

Bob Folwell, the former Pennsylvania star and now coach of Washington and Jefferson, showed real football brains in training his team to beat Yale this year. Folwell's team of last year was shot to pieces by graduation. He lost Spiegel and Fleming from his back field and his material this year was not only green, but light. He knew he could not develop a line smashing game with the material at hand, so he trained his backs in the fine art of forward passing, but not such passing as has been seen heretofore on eastern gridirons. His backs were taught to throw the ball low, at no time does it rise above the head of the thrower. The passes were not long ones either, never netting more than ten or fifteen yards, but served to beat Yale. Folwell also developed a whale of a run from kick formation, which completely bewildered the Yale men.

The W. & J. eleven displayed quite the "newest" style of football that has been seen in the east this year.

Home Gardening Notes.

Dig dahlias, cannas and gladiolus now, is the recommendation of the Cornell floriculturists, who say to cut off the tops of the dahlias, and cannas, but allow the gladiolus leaf blades to remain until they dry when the dead leaves and old bulbs can be broken apart and cleaned. Dahlias, cannas, and gladiolus should be stored in such a place as would keep potatoes. They should never get a touch of frost, nor should they become too dry or too damp.

Other notes from the college of agriculture follow:

Remove all the diseased parts of any plants in the garden. Burn them. By burning you may save the plants from disease another year. Cut off all tops of hollyhocks, phlox, peonies, and larkspurs, and do not allow them to decay in a pile or to remain on the ground where they have grown. Examine your iris for spots on the leaves, cut off all leaves so affected and add them to the bonfire. Leaves and other materials not diseased may well be saved and composted for their fertilizer value in the soil. But burn everything which shows disease spots.

You have brought your house plants indoors. They have grown tall and generally should be cut back quite severely. It will spoil their looks for a week or so, but may make them fine and bushy for the whole winter. Remember in taking up the plants you usually break some of the roots—the tops should therefore be shortened to bring balance. The proper balance of Geraniums, coleus, impatiens or balsam, most begonias and many other plants will have grown too spindling and tall and should be cut back two-thirds of their height.
